THE EDITOR loquens DICENDA TACENDA

(The compilation of these words was financed in part by the Carnegie Foundation Research Fund.)

The English words listed below, which number over 7000, have come from the Latin language without any change whatsoever or with very minor changes in the endings. The changes which do occur consist chiefly in the loss of the Latin ending or in the substitution of a letter or two for the Latin ending.

The Latin words from which these English words come may be found in Harpers' Latin Dictionary; the English words appear in Webster's Collegiate Dictionary (fifth edition), a dictionary which endeavors to meet the needs of the general reader as well as to satisfy the demands of the student at the college level.

Some of these words, it will be observed, have assumed a meaning quite specialized, or at least extended beyond that of the original. Such words, provided the basic meanings are in both languages essentially the same, are included, but marked with an asterisk.

A special feature of this study concerns itself with the frequency of these words in English usage. Each word has been checked against Thorndike and Lorge, The Teacher's Word Book of 30,000 Words, and also a list of 4800 words compiled in 1948 by Professor Paul S. Diederich of the University of Chicago and Professor Osmond E. Palmer of Michigan State University. The symbol (T-L) indicates that the word appears in Thorndike and Lorge among the first six thousand for frequency. The Diederich-Palmer list (D-P) is used to supplement Thorndike and Lorge, for it attempts "to include all generally useful words that high school students may not know, down to the level at which the words occur less than once in a million running words."

This list of words is primarily designed to provide the teacher of Latin with convenient source material for supplementary work in English derivatives from Latin. It can, at the same time, be used to assist the student in his effort to master his Latin vocabulary. Here again is tangible proof of the fact that the language we speak is so largely Latin.

GRAYDON W. REGENOS

Tulane University

The author's copy, excellent as such, was not prepared in the expectation that it would be photographed. Therefore in some places uneven spacing will be observed where insertions or corrections were necessary, and some strokes may be light. Expense was saved, and an exacting task of proof-reading avoided, by photography. For mechanical reasons, we had to choose between this reduction and an issue four times as large and expensive with added mailing costs. This makes the type smaller than we could wish, but allows us to sell extra copies at the reduced price of 25¢ as the Latin Week Bulletin.

VERGILIAN SUMMER SCHOOL IN ITALY

July and August, 1953

The Vergilian Society of America, under the Presidency of Dr. George D. Hadzsits, again offers this summer its unique program of on-the-spot study of classical remains at Pompeii, Herculaneum, Cumae, Baiae, Capri, Paestum, and the great National Museum in Naples. Lectures will be conducted at these sites by outstanding Italian scholars — Professors Maiuri, Elia, Sestieri, etc., and every facility will be provided for transportation to these historic places. Convenient modern living accommodations are provided at the Society's own Villa Vergiliana at ancient Cumae outside Naples; or in Naples itself when that is more advantageous. There are fine opportunities for private study at the sites, in the libraries, and in the Museum. Members of previous summer sessions have been enthusiastic about the special interest and inspirational value of this program. The coming summer's arrangements promise an even more memorable experience. As capacity of the school is limited, application should be made early.

The lecture series is arranged in a two-week cycle, to be repeated as needed from early July to late August. Those wishing longer or shorter participation in the program can arrange to do so. Tuition and transportation to lecture sites cost about $25 per week; room and meals amount to an additional $3.50 a day. Members must make their own arrangements for travel to and from Naples.

Those wishing to attend this summer session should contact Rev. Raymond V. Schoder, S.J., West Baden College, West Baden Springs, Indiana.
